Idlewilde Farm Open Range Eggs

Our Farm

Our Family run business offers fresh open range eggs, off our 115acre farm.

Here at IdleWilde Farm we have open range chickens and a small herd of goats living the good life.

We produce a great egg that's getting a more than good name for itself wherever we take it.

Our goal is to keep that standard, help others achieve it as well, and thereby help make a name and a tradition for the Elands, Bulga area as a source of good, clean, nutritional food that comes from a pristine environment.

The Birds

Our farm easily supports 1,100 birds on our 115 acres.

They are free to wander around our farm under the watchful eye of our three maremma dogs.

We have chosen Isa Brown birds as we feel they produce the best eggs. Because the chickens are free range we don't regulate how much the chicken eats unlike battery farms, this means we have a range of different weights and colours of shell and yolk. We operate like this as we believe a chicken should live a happy life.

Where our birds

Lay

Housing for birds is crucial as inclement weather and itinerant carnivores can take their toll. Customised caravans are one way of creating a safe dry home that can be moved to new pastures as the pasture rotation schedule dictates.

So what do we mean by Free Range?

Free-range eggs come from hens that have access to an outdoor area during the day. At night, large flocks of free-range hens are kept in sheds or barns to keep them safe from predators, while smaller flocks may be kept in moveable sheds to allow rotational use of the range area. Conditions on free-range farms vary greatly. On some farms, the range area is large, the hens have access to shade and shelter, and all hens are able to come and go from the range during the day; on others the range area is small, bare and difficult for hens to get to.
